

Structural Racism in Housing: A Closer Look at Prince George's County

Presenter: Kris Marsh, Ph.D.

This presentation will include three main approaches to understanding structural racism in housing:

- 1. Lecture, interactive exercises, and discussions to establish understandings of structural racism in the housing market and the broader impact on life chances, inequality and injustice
- 2. A review of current quantitative and qualitative social science literature on housing discrimination and related outcomes with an emphasis on Prince George's County
- 3. A discussion on ways to overcome discrimination and to promote fair housing for all

The following information will be covered:

- 1. A review of social science literature on structural racism and housing discrimination
- 2. The relationship between diverse populations, structural racism and housing opportunities/outcomes
- 3. The ways in which structural racism and discrimination impact housing opportunities and long-term consequences/outcomes
- 4. Approaches to understanding Prince George's County as an ideal case study for fair housing

Learning objectives for this presentation will include:

- 1. Participants will learn the definition of structural racism and related concepts
- 2. Participants will be able to identify the current and long-term consequences of housing discrimination
- 3. Participants will understand how structural racism in housing is measured
- 4. Participants will develop strategies to overcome structural racism

Virtual Presentation

Wednesday April 28, 2021 2:00PM-4:00PM